Shows Some Unusual Feats
With Bow and Arrow

Thrilling exhibitions of bait and flycasting techniques, and an unusual demonstration by a group of the East's leading exponents of the use of bow and arrow, headlined the April meeting of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association held in the Bristol high school auditorium last evening when 170 members and guests were present.

Ollie Hobbs, national baitcasting titleholder and a member of the Bristol club, performed with both the bait and flycasting rods when he demonstrated the proper techniques in handling both types of equipment. He also performed a number of difficult trick casts for the group.

Clarence Welch, president of the Philadelphia Archery Club, and frequent television performer, demonstrated a number of unusual feats with the bow and arrow in accuracy shooting. He was assisted by Don Flack, Furlong, one of the section's most capable men with the large hunting bow. Two boxes filled with the penetrating qualities of the arrow. A bullet from a police revolver and a rifled slug from a shotgun were fired into the boxes, both going through.

J. A. Willard, representative of the Philadelphia Women's SPCA, addressed the group briefly on the importance of kindness and care to animals. Two films, "Reclaim of the Wild" and "The Care of Your Dog," were shown through the courtesy of the Bristol Branch, Bucks County SPCA.

Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

At a meeting of Bedminster township taxpayers, held in the Dublin Fire Co. station, a proposal was adopted to have the Bedminster school board cooperate with six other districts in the area in the development of a plan for a jointly operated school.

The geographical location puts the township in a position where it could have united with any one of four groups in a joint school program. The purpose of the meeting was to determine just which joint group the taxpayers desire.

Other groups considered were the Central Bucks, Palsades and Quakertown. The Bedminster district was chosen without a dissenting vote. Nearly 100 taxpayers attended the meeting.

School Board of West Rockhill township by unanimous vote, decided to withdraw from the proposed eight-district consolidation of senior high schools.

The action was taken after members of the board reported on the reaction of taxpayers to the proposal. West Rockhill has been sending its senior high pupils to Sellers high school since 1931.

Nothing definite as to the reaction of the remaining seven districts will be revealed until the joint meeting.

TO SUBMIT REPORTS

The annual meeting, strictly for business, will be conducted by the Junior Travel Club in the club home at eight tomorrow evening. Request is made that all chairmen have reports ready at that time. Hostesses will be members of the finance committee.

DERIDES INADEQUATE SAFETY TRAINING

Lack of Training By Parents
Claimed Cause of Many
Kiddies' Deaths

CHIEF GIVES RULES

"The way our child walks, runs, and plays," Chief Linford J. Jones says to parents today in connection with an April program of traffic safety education, "may well determine his future... or lack of it."

Chief Jones pointed out that the National Safety Council lists inadequate safety training on the part of parents as an indirect cause for many of the annual traffic deaths among children under 15 years of age.

"National Safety Council figures show about a third of the children between five and 15 years old killed in traffic accidents each year were playing in the street at the time," he said. "About one-sixth of them ran or walked from behind parked cars and a fourth of them were struck while crossing between intersections. In far too many of these cases the child had never been taught that what he was doing was dangerous."

Bristol's traffic safety education activities this month are being coordinated in Bristol by the Courier in cooperation with the National Safety Council, and are built around the theme, Child Pedestrian and Bicycle Safety.

"It's ridiculous for parents to ignore the fact that, sooner or later, Junior is going to have to be cut loose and sent into traffic alone," Chief Jones, "Self reliance in coping with today's traffic must be taught our children. They must know how to walk and play safely."

The Chief urged parents to im-

Celebrate the Feast of Our Lady of Grace

The Feast of Our Lady of Grace was observed by St. Ann's R. C. parish yesterday, it being sponsored by the Society of Our Lady of Grace.

The program commenced with Solemn High Mass at 10 a. m., celebrated by the Rev. Louis Sylvester; he being assisted by the Rev. Donato Parente and the Rev. Bernard Harding.

The procession which then took place through the streets of the parish was participated in by St. Ann's parochial school pupils; members of the sponsoring society, and a band from Philadelphia. Returning to the church, the group heard benediction by the Rev. Fr. Harding.

Last evening the families of members of Our Lady of Grace Society enjoyed a social time in the church basement, an orchestra providing music.

A Soviet fighter plane fired upon a United States bomber over Latvia last Saturday, when, according to a Moscow note handed yesterday to Ambassador Kirk, the bomber "penetrated" Soviet territory and, instead of following directions to land, "opened fire on the Soviet planes." The note described the bomber as a "B-29." No B-29 was in that area and all in Europe have been accounted for, an Air Force official said. The Navy has been seeking an unnamed "Privateer" plane that disappeared Saturday on a flight between Wiesbaden, Germany, and Copenhagen. Washington confirmed many of these facts but the State Department withheld further comment.

KUNKEL ASSAILS "RUNAWAY TAXATION TRYING TO CATCH UP WITH RUNAWAY SPENDING;" IS CRITICAL OF FEDERAL AND STATE POLICIES

HARRISBURG, April 12.—(INS)—Congressman John C. Kunkel, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate, last night assailed "runaway taxation trying to catch up with runaway spending."

In a campaign speech at Harrisburg he was bitterly critical of federal and state fiscal policies and repeatedly flayed his opponent for the nomination, Gov. James H. Duff.

Kunkel accused Duff of using the Chief Executive's office to further political ambitions but said the voters will not be "hoodwinked" by the Governor's promises and counter charges.

Fellow Republicans: "It's a wonderful thing to have such an ovation from one's neighbors. It's a grand feeling to be able to stand on your feet and look your hometown friends in the eye."

Four months ago I started a fight. I dared to enter the race for Senator against an arrogant governor who thought that because he had a payroll of forty thousand and a budget of public money in the hundreds of millions, no one else had any business standing in his path.

I'm here tonight to report to you on how the fight is going. I can put my report in one word—"swell!"

Already I have carried my campaign into twenty-four counties, and I've talked face to face with a good many thousand Pennsylvanians.

And I can tell you right here and now that the men and women of Pennsylvania are just as interested as I am in having a showdown on the great issues which are plaguing the Republican Party and menacing the well-being of the American nation.

We want a showdown on the question of whether public office is a plaything for ambitious phonies or a challenge and opportunity for service for those who have seriously studied the problems of government.

We want a showdown on the question of whether this nation is to remain a free Republic, or be allowed to drift the rest of the way into bankruptcy, demoralization and socialism.

We want a showdown on whether public administration is to be a matter of prudence and careful judgment—or simply a toboggan ride in which our public figures worry only on how fast they can spend your resources, on the theory of "after us the deluge."

Recent events have called for another showdown. That's on the purpose and objective of state government. Are the state taxes collected and the payroll brought together in order to give the best and most efficient state government—or are

AIR RESERVE UNIT TO MEET AT LANGHORNE

Guest Speaker To Be Lt.
Edw. Rosenbaum of Phila.
Area Hdq. Staff

Attention of all Bucks County Air Force Reserve and former Air Force officers is called to the next meeting of "Flight" "C", 9550th Volunteer Air Reserve Training Squadron, which will be held Wednesday evening, April 12th, 7:30 p. m., at the American Legion Country Club, Langhorne.

Guest speaker at this session will be Lt. Edward Rosenbaum of the Philadelphia Area Hdq. staff. Lt. Rosenbaum will speak on "Air Force Reserve Organization" and answer questions that may arise pertaining thereto.

Formally organized early in March of this year, this Air Force Reserve unit was formed to enable officers of the Bucks County area to become active in Reserve circles in a unit in their home section. Participation in and attendance at meetings will enable officers to build up points toward promotion in rank, and eventual retirement—at the same time keeping their commissions from being dropped or placed on the inactive rolls. Besides guest speakers as often as possible, the unit has a regular study topic which will prove quite interesting to officers of all ranks regardless of MOS.

Any and all interested reserve and former Air Force officers are urged to attend this meeting—further information can be obtained from the Flight Commander, Captain Walter Darges, phone Bristol 2363; 1st Lt. Lester Stine, phone Morrisville 5293; 1st Lt. William Sisserson, phone Yardley 2968.

INFLATION AHEAD

Comment in business and financial circles is almost unanimously to the effect that a new inflationary spiral is building up that will make itself felt in soaring prices by summer. Lumber prices have shot up from 25 to 40 per cent in Oregon, source of much of the nation's supply, since last August. Wages continue to advance as union after union forces higher rates on industry, business and transportation.

There is no longer expectation of lower automobile prices. New contracts being entered into between the CIO and the automobile manufacturers will prevent cuts in prices of the finished product. And the large manufacturers seem to have encountered no difficulty in marketing all the vehicles they can produce, and output of several companies, is up 50 per cent from the near-record figures of a year ago.

Tire prices are advancing, on the heels of wage boosts for factory workers and increases in the price of raw rubber. The price of horse shoes has recently advanced from $12 to $15 a keg, believe it or not.

Decentralization of rents will bring boosts in states where wartime restrictions have been continued until now. Rents have not kept pace with wages, incomes or property values. They will now join the inflationary parade.

Stocks on the New York market started to advance many months ago, when many economic oracles could see nothing but a slowdown in business activity ahead. But they now look more attractive to many buyers than they did at much lower quotations a year ago.

EASY SPENDING

One of the greatest dangers threatening the American people is the possibility they will become reconciled to increasing taxation to the point that they will meekly accept any and all new levies regardless of the increasing burden.

As the public loses its natural inclination to fight against rising taxes, either because of lack of leadership or in a spirit of numb hopelessness, the free spenders take advantage of the situation and come forward with ever increasing demands upon the public purse.

It is amazing how many schemes the easy-come-easy-go boys can think up which call for additional taxes. In control of government, from federal to municipal, they appear to have no thought of cost. It's all very wonderful, and gives the free spenders of other people's money a fine chance to bask in the limelight.

The free spenders will continue to play the taxpayers for suckers until they unite to put an end to governmental foolishness.

The "political club" in which two Kansas City gangsters were slain has a large picture of Harry S. Truman on the wall and is located on Truman Road. Association?

Kunkel Assails "Runaway Taxation Trying to Catch Up With Runaway Spending"

they nothing more than political campaign resources to be squandered by whatever ambitious official happens to come into control of them?
Put it this way—what are the people of Pennsylvania paying taxes for—to take care of their problems of government—or to help Jim Duff run for the Senate? And to put a handpicked county boss in the Governor's chair?

Here at the seat of government, in front of an audience which includes many who are now or have been on the state payroll, is an ideal place to raise such a question.
To my way of thinking, the campaign of the Duff-Fine boys in this primary is a disgrace to a civilized people.

There are plenty of you in this room who know by your own observations the truth of my charge that the entire executive branch of the state government has been diverted from its proper function and geared into a political machine to try to elect Duff Senator and Fine Governor.

You know of your own knowledge of the macing which has been going on. You know of your own knowledge the intimidation and sand-bagging which finally forced the acceptance of the Duff-Fine ticket by the county chairmen fourteen miles from here at Hershey. This is an odd campaign.

One week ago tonight I pointed out on the radio another phase of the corrupt and debasing approach of this Duff-Fine ticket.
I challenged Governor Duff to deny that his hand-picked running mate, whom he shoved down the county chairmen's throat at Hershey, was the political boss of the most corrupt county in this state.

On this point, the Governor made a full confession. What he said is worth hearing again, so I'll quote his exact words:

"Kunkel with feigned indignation, calls upon me to declare whether I did not know there were widespread rackets in Luzerne County where Judge Fine lives. The answer to that is, 'Yes.' End of quotation.

I ask you, my friends and neighbors, how could the issue of good, clean government be drawn any more clearly than it now is in this campaign.

I charged that Governor Duff hand-picked his candidate for Governor from a racketeering county, where for more than twenty years racketeering and extortion have been steadily increasing during the political bossism of this political judge.

Governor Duff did not even bother to deny the charge. On the contrary, he conceded its truth.

Fellow Republicans, where do you stand on this question?

Which side are you on?
Do you want to pick your own public officials, and to do so because they are citizens of integrity and ability and high personal standards?

Or do you want this job done for you by an arrogant governor, who selects his man from a den of racketeering simply because he figures that is the way to bring to his support the largest number of boss-controlled votes?

If that isn't a sell-out of the decent-minded Pennsylvania people, what is it?

Think it over. And when you have, I am certain you will conclude that every high-minded man or woman, believers in good government, are running mates with me in this primary—and that the only way they have a Chinaman's chance to keep racketeering and corruption from taking over the State government is to defeat the Duff-Fine ticket on May 16th.

Again and again, I have called upon Governor Duff to talk about some of the issues in this year's elections. He has weaseled and ducked, evaded and dodged. He is willing to drag red herrings across the trail. But he will not stand up before the Pennsylvania people and tell them his views on the problems which this generation must solve.

Take the question of taxation. The tax load today has reached the point where it is stifling the initiative of individuals. The harder a man works and the more he earns, the greater is the percentage of the fruits of his toil taken by the government.

Taxation is choking off the flow of capital into new businesses and into expanding businesses. Such investments are well known to be risky. If the investor loses—and the odds always are against him in a new business—he bears the whole loss.

If he makes a success of the venture, then the government takes so much of his profit that, in many instances, he would have done equally well to put his money into government bonds and avoided the risk.

With everything to lose and little to gain, people just won't take risks. No one should blame them for that. They've merely made a proper appraisal of the situation.

This choking off of venture or risk capital is a major cause of the growing demand for the Government to invade various fields of private business. Unless the trend is reversed—not hastened—you may soon see the nationalization of

Textbooks Shouldn't Be Boring

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

A DISCERNING reader who is a bachelor writes me every now and then a very stimulating letter. Recently he wanted to know why the modern elementary reading textbook is so low in literary value, and so much lower than some of the best children's books one may find in the public library or purchase from a book store.

If you will examine half a dozen sets of school readers used most widely you will probably agree with me that this writer's implications are correct. There are two chief reasons, I think: One has been the rage among many reading experts for using in a school reader at particular grade level only words most often used by children of the average age in this grade, in speaking or writing. As you know, a number of word lists have been compiled on this basis and on the basis of their frequency of use in the most commonly-read printed matter.

Proper Grading
For many years the publishers of sets of school readers have used as a big, if not the chief, sales appeal, the proper grading of vocabulary in each book. Wisely, perhaps, the authors of such books, who have famous names, employ classroom teachers to write the stories and features for the grade levels in which these teachers have taught. Apparently each writer is instructed to keep at hand a good word book and make sure that few or no words not listed in the word book for that grade appear in her story or feature; that, moreover, each word shall be repeated a certain number of times.

In theory this appears almost perfect. The child is not set to learn to read many new words in a lesson, meets gradually with new words with whose meaning he already is fairly familiar and gets practice on these new words. But if you or I try to write with such mechanics we soon do dull writing. Our feelings and imagination are hampered. We become writing robots.

Making Up Yarn
You may have been enthralled at listening to a little child three, four or five making up a yarn of his own. Suppose you were to tell him constantly he must not use that word but this word. Sometimes a parent will send me a story by a preschool child which this parent has taken down. It is pretty easy to ascertain whether the story was taken down word for word or was "doctored" by the recorder. (My bulletins, "Letting Little Children Learn," "Now Come the Fairies," "Helping Our Children Succeed at School" may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper).

It's not so much the words as the context that matters most to the listening or reading child. How much does it stir up his feeling and fire his imagination? Anyway, a young child likes to hear or read some big words. He may learn them far more easily than short words like as, to, if, when, for, the, at.

Another reason for the literary lack in most primary school readers is the silly practice begun several decades ago, passing slowly from trade books, but lingering still in most sets of school readers, of squeezing out of most that is fanciful by the here and now of realism. Can one find much great literature of any period, which does not have a strong appeal to the imagination? While mothers revel in fancies of a modern novel their little children may be bored with learning to read at school a mechanical mixture of words.

every citizen of the United States, as well as the ten and one-half million of us who live in Pennsylvania.

Friends and neighbors, I am proud and honored to be with you tonight. After four months of campaigning, my flag is still high. I have great confidence in the Pennsylvania people. I believe we will win this fight.

When I entered the race last December, many persons told me I was foolish to do so. They saw the great power of the state administration being massed to be thrown against me. They knew about the long build-up which Duff has been getting for himself at the taxpayers expense. They told me that I was right in what I said, but that no one man could buck such a machine.

I started out in this campaign as the underdog. That's all right. I don't mind being the underdog, so long as I can feel that what I am fighting for is right and is worth the battle.

But the Pennsylvania voters are hard to fool. When I got out and began circulating among them, I found that Duff had not hoodwinked them. They have sized him up for what he is. And I tell you tonight that there is a tidal wave of resentment forming against this arrogant and ambitious figure who has tried to twist the state government and the Republican party into tools for building his own ambitions.

Wait until May 16—and see who is the underdog then!

Industrial Club Has Second Anniversary

Frank Wilson and Robert Arrowood, Minnesota Mining and Mfg. Co.

Arnold Baren was called upon to tell about the forthcoming meeting and conference of the National Council to be held on May 11th to 13th in Richmond, Va. He said "I bring you greetings from the National Council, and commend you on the wonderful job you have done in such a short time. The National Council is holding its annual meeting, and it is hoped many of you will be able to attend." Mr. Baren told of program of the conference. He said: "If you want to enjoy a week-end and gain the benefits of meeting and talking to others in your field of work it will be well worth attending this conference."

An important business meeting is scheduled for next month, election time approaching, Mr. Straub stated. Nomination of officers will take place.

The meeting was turned over to J. Alfred Rigby, Jr., 1st vice president. Mr. Rigby said "The speaker we have tonight has a varied background and is well qualified to be the speaker for our anniversary. The Rev. Dennis J. Comey, taught high school boys in Boston, taught college sophomores at Georgetown University, from 1932 to 1937 he lectured in dogmatic theology at Woodstock College, and was president of St. Peter's College in Jersey City from 1937 to 1942. Since 1943 he has been associated with the Institute of Industrial Relations at St. Joseph's College of which he is now director. He was given the 'man of the month' award last spring for his work in the field of labor relations."

The Rev. Mr. Comey said "Labor relations is a large field, and needs to go a lot further and should be termed 'human relations.' We need a sense of balance in this field, and until we get that we will be missing the boat. Here in the United States we have passed through a revolution in labor relations. Everyone is looking for security and freedom, more so here in America than any place else. Thirty years ago the worker was not given a chance to present any ideas to his boss. Today he is invited to sit down at a conference and present any ideas he might have. This has not been too successful yet, but it is on the right track."

"There has been a great transformation in strikes since 1910. To see how much damage could be done with violence was the way with strikers. Today they sit down at a table and talk it over. Still any strike is disastrous. No one wants to strike, and most of the time they are both right. In the steel strike the steel companies objected to the fact-finding boards as they felt they were infringing on their freedom; and the strikers, or steel workers, were fighting for security. Thus the issue was for both security and freedom, and that is where human values comes in labor relations. The human value requires a little more study of what we are as humans. The failure to study man is what is wrong with most labor relations, or human relations, so that is where we should begin. To do this we must go back to the beginning of time. God made man in his own image and made him the most superior thing in the world. Only man is able to reason and think. Just look what man has done! He can send his voice across the ocean and many other wonderful things. Some of the things have changed our way of living. Some men have even sent nations to war. There is tremendous power locked up in man. We can ask the question 'Why has man this power?' The answer to this is that man can use this power to plan a future on earth and in heaven, and the high point of his power is found in wisdom. Every man has a natural right to plan and if he is to amount to anything he must make plans to do so. This is a right given to him by Almighty God and no one can take it away from him. This right is one of the touch-stones of the problem that we call labor."

"Man is so free that he can do almost anything and his security and freedom is his right. The employer says 'this is my business and no one can tell me how to run it.' He is arguing on a natural basis of security and freedom. The employee says 'You have me listed as a truck driver and do not even think of me except how much work you can get from me. I want to do something with my life. I want security and freedom.' The problem is not employer and employee meeting head-on, as they are both right in their thinking. The answer is collective bargaining. It has never failed as it has never been tried. Just about the time we might have tried it we fell into a war, and to get the war over we did not try any kind of bargaining. After the war we went through the pretense of collective bargaining; once each year we made a new agreement. The real issue at any bargaining table is more than to see how much you can get without giving anything — it is the obligation we owe to one another. We all must think in terms of others; united, pulling together in our power as men. It is possible to reach the goal. It is impossible to carry the load alone. All have in common the expression of being social. To fulfill this everyone must give something of his self. This is one issue that is never heard of at the bargaining table — how much freedom do I give up for security? Every one's freedom is restrained by social obligations. Just good manners are a restraint on freedom. Yet in labor relations it is not thought of. We are fighting the same fight in labor relations that was fought 30 years ago. It has just moved indoors. It still is 'you give me your freedom and I will give you security.' The only one I can give all my freedom to is God. Both sides of the bargaining table have a right to freedom and security. It is man's natural right. Labor and management need each other. We must be social and think of others. Only those who are willing to respect the rights of others are allowed to live freely and in security. All labor problems thus become a problem of human relations."

In closing he said: "The labor problem is a large field and again I say it is a human problem and that is the way it should be thought of at the bargaining table. It all boils down to a matter of going to heaven or hell, and it is very unlikely any of us will go either place alone. We are sure to take someone with us."

Derides Inadequate Safety Training

press the following rules on their children:

1. Remember—the streets are for cars—not scooters, tricycles, or play.

2. Cross the street only at the corner, preferably at one with an automatic signal or traffic officer. Look both ways, then for turning traffic, and cross only when the way is clear.

3. Never forget that bicycles are subject to the same rules and regulations governing automobiles, including the careful observance of signs and signals.

"With about 2,300 children between the ages of five and 15, alone, being killed in traffic accidents each year," Chief Jones said, "it's time we quit laying the blame exclusively on the shoulders of the motorist, the child's immaturity, and Fate. Parents must know that they are involved as deeply in this problem as anyone!"

Protest Group Visits Council

formation is not being handed out until it is final and exact. May said it was his personal opinion that the people who must move will be directly contacted in the "near future." When asked by Greco how much time the residents would have in which to vacate after the plans were finished, May said he did not know.

The council passed Greco's motion that a letter be written to the secretary of the Bridge Commission, in which the following questions would be asked:

1. What area is to be condemned?
2. When will work on the bridge start?
3. How much time will the residents have for evacuation?
4. When will money be available for payment for the homes?
5. How soon can the council receive a map of the condemned area?

Justice of Peace Neal Nolan brought up the suggestion that the bridges, parking yard and administration building be built outside the borough instead of on Grove St. Borough Secretary William H. Howell said the council had taken up that suggestion with the commission and it was being studied.

May asked for approval of a map showing the exact location of streets in the area near the new bridge. A motion was passed making the map official.

skating events, track and field events and numerous other competitions.

The committee, along with all others interested, will be held next Tuesday evening in the Elks' Home at eight o'clock, when detailed plans will be submitted. Copies of all of the events will be distributed to the district leaders.

It is made emphatic that the week of May 22 to May 27 is for both girls and boys, and the events are being planned with that idea in mind.

Indications are that the rivalry between the districts will be keen, and that the week will be a memorable one in the lives of the participants.

*No Finer List of Names

If you had in your hand a list of all the people in the world who own and ride in Cadillac cars, we think you'd agree that you could search in vain for another list of equal size—and greater distinction.

Cadillac is the great common meeting ground for the world's distinguished people. Wherever the car is available, it has become almost the automatic companion for outstanding personal achievement.

And yet, such is the magic of Cadillac's manufacturing ingenuity, that this internationally distinguished car is available at a price which makes it a great practical value.

The lowest-priced Cadillac model—the lovely "Sixty-One"—actually costs less than certain models of numerous other makes of cars.

The great Cadillac engine is so economical to operate that gasoline mileage actually approaches that of the smallest, most economical cars. In a recent officially supervised economy run, three Cadillac cars averaged better than twenty-two miles to the gallon for 751 miles!

And there is simply no practical limit to the car's endurance. It is merely a question of how long you wish to keep it and drive it. The full lifespan of a Cadillac has never been accurately measured.

In view of all this, isn't it the part of wisdom to add your own name to the list of those who own this distinguished car?

This is a wonderful year for moving up to Cadillac. The car has never been so beautiful, so luxurious—so utterly thrilling to ride in and drive. It is an everlasting satisfaction to utilize and possess.

Better come in and talk it over. We'd be most happy to see you—any time. But please bear in mind that every day you delay will cost you its price in pleasure and satisfaction. Why not come in today?

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the duties of the officers, membership, and possible activities.
A "Swap-Shop" was then held to discuss the various functions of the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs in other schools. After lunch a meeting was held and the following officers were elected: Frank Dougherty from Germantown, president, George Hittman from Norristown, vice-president, Ginger Glaiser from West Chester, treasurer, and Joseph Cieslinski from Bristol Township, secretary.

"I understand tomorrow is the opening of one of the biggest pre-building and pre-enlarging sales ever undertaken by any store in Bristol. Yes, Auto Boys, 408-16 Mill Street, are practically going to have their whole store on sale. They must raise fifty thousand dollars to make the present store three times its present size. Imagine that! And they tell me everything in the store is reduced, with discounts of 10 to 20 per cent on items not already sale priced. Yes, indeed, it looks like a fine time to get some real bargains!"

WHAT IS FINAL WORD ON BIG LEAGUE BASEBALL FOR 1950?

What is the final word on big league baseball for 1950? Who are the teams to beat, the dark horses, the have-nots — and why? In the following article, first in a series of six, International News Service digests all pre-season facts and fancies, and takes a "last look" at the defending champion New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers.

By Charles Einstein
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, Apr. 12 — (INS) — The New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers are dealing in terms of miracles in 1950.

It will be a minor miracle if the Yankees repeat as pennant winners. And a major miracle if the Dodgers don't.

Few pennant winners have gone on to become world champions and then, blessed with the same material the next year, been so thoroughly discounted as the Yanks are this time around.

Yankee Manager Casey Stengel has everything he had last year, in terms of what brought him his pennant—plus a healthy Joe DiMaggio.

Yet the Yanks are almost universally ranked no better than second, behind the Boston Red Sox, in pre-season odds.

This pleases Mr. Stengel somewhat. The wizened "magic man" of 1949 faces only one major problem—that of developing a sure fifth starter to go with his regular pitching foursome of Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds, Ed Lopat and Tom Byrne. If Case can do that, and if the Yanks stay healthy, New Yorkers can expect big things from such assuredly big talent as Rizzuto, Coleman, Berra, Henrich, Page and Di Mag.

Furthermore, if Dick Wakefield, problem-child from Detroit Tigers to the Yanks, can uncork, it will more than compensate for the loss of Charlie Keller to the Tigers.

Fortunately, or perhaps unfortunately, Manager Burt Shotton of the Dodgers has even fewer problems than Mr. Stengel.

He has, in Roy Campanella, the best catcher in baseball.

He has, in Gil Hodges, Jackie Robinson, Pee Wee Reese and the phenomenal new third baseman Bobby Morgan, the best overall infield.

He has, in hurricane-ball Don Newcombe, what looks like a sure 20-game winner, if not the best pitcher of 1950.

He has, in Carl Furillo and Duke Snider, two top-rank outfielders.

He has the pleasant vista of a National League which boasts no other club that can muster the Dodgers' on-paper strength.

He also has, in case the Dodgers don't win the flag, the apparently inevitable prospect of looking for another job.

WHITFIELD DOES A FINE PITCHING JOB FOR BENSLEM

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 12

Bensalem Township High received superb pitching from Bob Whitfield and Bob Marshall yesterday afternoon as it opened its 1950 baseball season with a 5-1 victory over Lower Moreland High.

Whitfield and Marshall combined permitted but one hit, that being by Jones in the final frame when Lower Moreland tallied its lone run.

The Owls took advantage of wild hurling on the part of Manderville to score a quintet of runs in the first inning. The first trio of batters to step up to the plate were given passes and then "Walt" Smith plastered a single to account for a pair of runs. Before the inning was over, the Owls scored three more runs on a passed ball and two fielder's choices.

GLACIERS

LARAMIE, Wyo. — (INS) — U. S. Forest Service officials say that two glaciers in the Laramie, Wyo., area date from 50,000 years ago, and remain as mementoes of a once extensive glacier system. One of the slowly moving ice masses covers 480 acres, and the other—a mere baby in comparison—takes up about three acres. State Geologist Dr. H. D. Thomas terms the ice fields "a relatively unusual phenomenon."
